

GOOD OATS. GOOD MORNINGS.

PUT THE KETTLE ON. HERE'S OUR STORY.

IT STARTS IN A FIELD.

There are mornings for sitting at the kitchen table and mornings for finding your keys with a piece of toast in your mouth. Goodfield belongs in both. We make oat drinks for cereal bowls, fridge doors and people who take their coffee rather seriously. Something good to pour while the rest of the day gets itself together.

It starts with oats grown in Britain, and growers who know their soil, their weather and their harvest. We listen. Those relationships are part of the recipe, long before a carton reaches your kitchen. Goodfield began with Ellie Morgan's belief that an everyday oat drink could taste excellent and be made with more care. That is still the job.

IT ENDS UP AT YOUR TABLE.

At our Newcastle factory, the work carries on. Our team turns those oats into the drink in your carton, paying attention to flavour and all the small jobs that help it reach your kitchen as it should. There are people behind every step. A good carton has to earn its place in the fridge.

So we take flavour seriously, alongside the farming, resources and people that make it possible. We keep looking for practical ways to waste less and make the everyday a little better. Pour Goodfield Original into your coffee, splash it over cereal or have a glass cold while the kettle sorts itself out.

However your morning turns up, there's room for a good oat drink in it. Pull up a chair. Get stuck in.

MAKE ROOM IN YOUR FRIDGE.